

Eric Oppenheimer is the Director of the State Water Board's Office of Research, Planning and Performance, where he is responsible for overseeing performance management, climate change, economic analysis, scientific peer review, and strategic planning. Eric has almost 20 years of experience in water resources management that has included assignments with two Regional Water Boards and the State Water Board's Division of Water Rights. Prior to his current appointment, Eric served as the Branch Chief overseeing municipal water quality investigations for the Department of Water Resources. He holds bachelor's degrees in economics, and environmental science and ecology.